Griselda Blanco — The Godmother of Cocaine and Her Children

Griselda Blanco Restrepo (1943–2012) was a Colombian drug trafficker known as the “Godmother of Cocaine” and the “Black Widow” for her ruthless control of Miami’s cocaine trade in the 1970s and ’80s Wikipedia +1 . Born in Cartagena or Santa Marta, Colombia, she began her criminal life at a young age, allegedly kidnapping and killing a child at 11, and later became a pickpocket and sex worker Wikipedia +1 .

Children

Blanco had four children with different men during her criminal career Wikipedia +1 :

Show All

- Dixon Trujillo Blanco – Born to her first husband, Carlos Trujillo, a small-time smuggler. Their marriage ended in divorce, and Blanco is believed to have ordered Trujillo’s murder in the 1970s Wikipedia +1 .
- Uber Trujillo Blanco – Also born to Carlos Trujillo, one of Blanco’s sons Wikipedia .
- Osvaldo Trujillo Blanco – Another son of Carlos Trujillo Wikipedia .
- Michael Corleone Blanco – Born to her third husband, Dario Sepúlveda, a Colombian businessman and alleged associate of the Medellín Cartel Wikipedia +1 .

Rise to Power

Blanco’s drug empire spanned Colombia and the U.S., with Miami as its base. She used creative smuggling methods, such as lingerie with hidden compartments, to transport cocaine Britannica . Her violence was infamous — she allegedly killed all three of her husbands and was linked to hundreds of murders, including high-profile Miami Beach mall shootings Britannica +1 .

Death

In 2012, at age 69, Blanco was shot dead in Medellín, Colombia Wikipedia .

In summary: Griselda Blanco’s children — Dixon, Uber, Osvaldo, and Michael — were the offspring of her multiple marriages to Carlos Trujillo and Dario Sepúlveda, each tied to her rise and fall as one of the most feared female drug lords in history.
